

BANGOR WHIG.

THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1841.

Mr. CONVERSE meets on the 31st inst., and the session will probably be one of great interest. The financial condition of the government will then be known, and the needed measures of reform and remedy brought forward. Parson Tylor's oration will be looked for with the deepest interest. He will probably confine his remarks to the condition of the government rather than laborious arguments in favor of measures he would wish legislated upon. We have had enough of Executive interference and control in the legislative department, and it is time now that representatives express the voice of the people. The elections for members of Congress thus far have strengthened the hopes of the Whigs for the prosperity of the administration of their choice, and for the progress of the great measures of reform and remedy which will be brought forward. "Bonds" of apprehension of apathy were entertained; but the decisions of the popular voice thus far show that the Whig strength has increased in several of the states, and especially where a falling off was most feared. Virginia and Indiana. This is cheering. The friends of the Government have a deep interest in securing a powerful support to the administration in Congress. If it should be weakened there, the ascendancy of the principles on which the last great revolution was achieved, might be hazard, and the most beneficent plans of the President and those charged with the Executive Department might be impeded, and defeated. At present all looks well.

We have received a copy of the 24th annual Report of the American Colonization Society. The Executive Committee represent the Colony at Liberia in a prosperous condition, and an increasing interest is manifested in the United States in its behalf. There has been but one case of pain manifesting itself in the operations of the society the past year, and that is the uncommon infidelity which has prevailed among the last emigrants. A more healthy site is recommended in the interior, at which emigrants may pass through the accimated fever. The receipts of the Society the last year including that year's balance, amount to $2,562 91, being $1,073 33 more than has been received during any one preceding year, which fact is adduced to as furnishing conclusive proof of the increasing interest felt by a benevolent community in the objects and operations of the society.

Old creditors have received $8,757 42 of their debts, leaving a balance due of 10,500, which the society hoped to discharge in the course of the year.

The Board of Directors express the strongest confidence in the ultimate accomplishment of all that the founders of the Society intended to wit, to secure an Asylum for the negroes of America, and to extend civilization and Christianity to those of Africa, and the Board look to the benevolent efforts of the philanthropist and Christian to aid the cause of Colonization.

Mr. The Congressional election in Tennessee took place on Thursday, May 6th. The delegation to the last Congress consisted of 7 Whigs, and 6 Van Buren men. No definite intelligence has yet been received of the result of the election. In the Nashville precincts, Carthage's majority (Whig) was 327. In November Hartson's majority there was 211.

The Montreal "Linenay" is not improbable that Lord Sydenham will vacate his office of Governor-General early in the fall and return to England. By some, it is confidently said that he will be succeeded by Lord Mopeth, now Secretary for Ireland by others, that the Government will be tendered to Sir C. Metcalf, the present Governor of Jamaica.

The locofoco paper in this city vauntingly publishes the number and classification of officers at Washington as represented by the Globe. It is only necessary to say in relation to this, that the charters, the table to which reference is made, may be known from the fact that Ammon K. Parr is there represented as a Federalist.

Those who are in want of forest trees, and wish them well and carefully transplanted, will find Mr. James Pendergast an excellent man for the purpose. He has received the commendation of several men acquainted with the subject.

Three of the four men concerned in the St. Louis tragedy have been taken and are now in the hands of the law. The fourth went to New Orleans—has been pursued there, and there is little doubt that he also is in custody.

Mr. Springer gave his introductory Lecture on Wednesday afternoon, and notwithstanding the unpleasant state of the weather, it was quite fully attended. His next Lecture, on the Solar System, will be on Saturday afternoon next.

We learn that the Fair of the ladies of the Union Society closed last evening, and that it was a very successful affair. The receipts were about $800, leaving free of expense at least $500, which, we understand, is to be appropriated to suitable decoration of the interior of their church.

Our market is now regularly supplied with abundance of salmon and shad taken from our white Environment.

Postscript. Just our paper was going to press it cleared off.

Tippecanoe Flag. James Brooks, Esq. of New York, in compliance with instructions from soldiers who were engaged in the battle of Tippecanoe presented to President Tyler the flag borne on that occasion by Brush Tipton, late Senator Tipton of Indiana. We find the letter of Mr. Brooks accompanying the flag in the National Intelligencer, and the following reply of the President. The editors state in a note that it is of Tipton that this anecdote is related. General Harrison rode up to Brush Tipton in the heat of the fight and asked him, "Where is your captain?" "Dead sir." "Your lieutenant?" "Dead sir." "Your second lieutenant?" "Dead sir." "Your ensign?" "He stands before you!" where Tipton then stood, holding and defending this very flag, so covered with dirt and so besmeared with blood that Gen. Harrison scarcely knew him. "Hold on," said Harrison, "for a moment longer; I will reinforce you," and he rode off and took up the company of Capt. Robbins by which time, or soon after, of the seventy-five men under Capt. Spencer, there were only two or three left, one of whom was wounded. In this company was the flag. This letter of the President refers to the gallant bearer of it.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

To James Brooks, Esq.

Washington, May 4, 1841.

The flag which was in the midst and thick of the strife, and was committed to your care on the Tippecanoe battle ground by the surviving soldiers of that memorable field, and which they command you to bear to this metropolis as a living emblem of the valor of their old commander, and of the perils he had undergone, has been delivered over to my hands, and will be placed by me among the honored trophies of the Republic. The account which was given me some years ago, by the gallant Ensign now no more, who upheld that banner amid the perils of the fight, had prepared me to expect to see it as it is, gashed by the tomahawk and rent by balls. That Ensign alone of all the officers, with but twenty men of the gallant company over which, when the sun went down, that flag so proudly waved, survived to tell in the morning of the hazards of that terrible night. From that brave soldier, who afterwards held a high place in the hearts of the people of Indiana, I learned properly to appreciate the fearless bearing and noble conduct of the patriotic citizen who has so recently exchanged this earthly tabernacle of clay for one that endures forever. Death is the common heritage of all mankind; but so to live as that the darkness of the grave shall not obscure our names, and that they be placed in the association with the names of the great and good who have gone before, and who are to come after us, makes death itself a consummation rather to be wished than feared; and throws a light of glory over the grave. Such, now, is the condition of the old commander into whose hands, when you received this flag you so joyously anticipated its delivery. His deeds are now enrolled in the Capitol, and this banner shall be preserved as a memorial of a battle well fought, and of a victory, most nobly won.

I pray you, sir, to accept assurances of my great respect.

JOHN TYLER.

Suspicion of Piracy. James Reed, master of a fishing schooner at Gloucester, Mass., has made oath to a statement of which the following is the substance: He swears that on the 12th inst. being at sea about fifteen miles from New Jersey shore, he saw a small boat with three men in it, heading so far inland opposite Manhasset. At the same time he saw a schooner about six miles east of him, with her mizzenail up, and yawing in the wind so strangely as to convince him that there was no one on board to steer. He immediately bore away for her, and on reaching her found that she was the schooner Mogul of this city. She was on her broad, the nearly full of water. He saw an upper hole which had been lately bored through her starboard quarter with a two-inch auger. Some of his crew were with him, and they went together into the cabin, where they found two chestnut and empty. On the bed of the Captain's berth there was a bundle of clothes, and the appearance of a body in the berth; but the crew pressed so hard against the carline of the deck that they could not be recovered. They left her about 4 o'clock P. M., at which time she was fast a-winking. In conclusion, the defendant does solemnly swear that it is the belief of all who saw the bed and bedding before referred to, that the dead body of some person was in the Captain's berth of said schooner Mogul.

Further developments must clear up this mysterious matter. Col. Darcy, U. S. Marshal for N. Jersey, in connection with several others engaged in efforts to discover the men who were going ashore in the small boat. The Mogul was owned by Neomith & Lunde and Michell & Co. of this city. The owners believe that Cap. Snow and two others on board have been murdered. The crew consisted of Wm. F. Green, J. J. Cantine, cook, Lyman French, James D. Fox, and Thomas Smith, seamen.

Mr. Rives in FAVOR OF A NATIONAL BANK. The Richmond Star says: "It is stated, and we believe upon good authority, that Wm. Rives has declared in favor of a National Bank. We hope he has for a large portion of those who were once most furious against such a bank, have now disengaged that it is impossible for the business of the country to flourish without one, and when a man falls into himself in error, we like to see him come out honest and say so."

Expllosion. A Correspondent of the N. York Herald writing from Charlestown B. C. on the 8th inst. states that an accidental explosion had occurred at Fort Moultrie, which is now a heap of ruins. The magazine was undergoing some necessary repairs, and by some means, not accountable, fire and powder was in contact, and the entire structure, with a few buildings in the vicinity, were torn to atoms by the explosion of powder. At the time of the explosion, there were several soldiers near the magazine, and about forty persons in the fort. The number of lives lost has not yet been ascertained.

Our market is now regularly supplied with abundance of salmon and shad taken from our white Environment.

A number of early birds were in a bush in a day, and a caterpillar eat 500 times more a night before it flies down to a butterfly.

Discrediting a Broker, and deceiving a Bank. On Friday evening, Mr. P. Adams, broker, of No. 62 Wall street, as was usual with him, deposited his trunk, containing about $3,000 in money, and bonds, certificates, &c. for upward of $10,000, in the Phenix Bank. In the morning, as soon as the Bank opened, a boy entered the Bank with a note addressed to the Bank of New York, with the name of Mr. Adams, subscribed to it repeating the "where to" deliver to the bearer the trunk of Mr. Adams; and as soon as the boy saw the trunk, he cried out, "That's the one." The trunk was given to him and he disappeared. Soon after, Mr. Adams sent for the trunk, and it was gone, and the order sent for it to be sent to the g. forgery. No tidings have been received of the boy or trunk since its disappearance from the Bank, and the perpetrators of the bold fraud and forgery have probably shakenly; and in the conversation of the evening he enjoyed into participants. I have been laboring day and almost night for two years; and I am more in debt now than when I began. My creditors are pressing for payment; I am conscious of my inability to meet their demands, and can perceive no result but bankruptcy and ruin. But have you not a large list of subscribers, and I—

Yes, very large list, is the reply; but too many of them are like you!

Me! I quickly rejoined in amazement, The many like me.

Pardon me, said my friend in a melancholy tone, "pardon me, for apprehension will make even a wise man mad. You have had a quart of wheat weekly for two years; and I have not had a cent of payment. I have a large list of the same kind of patrons scattered here and there over thousands of miles. If they would pay me the tithe, they would easily do me, I should be directly freed from embarrassment, and go on my way rejoicing. But they reason as you reason, and among you, I am brought to the door of poverty and ruin."

I felt the full force of the rebuke, and promptly paying arrears at the increased price named in the prospectus, and also a year in advance. I shortly bid adieu to the worthy and wronged farmer, resolving to do every thing in my power to repair the injury which had been accrued from my disengagement.

Ye patrons of Jonathan Homespun! when ever you are or wherever you are, ye who have received and eaten the wheat from his Granary, with unwilling payment! Ye are guilty of a grievous sin of conumdrum. Wherefore repent, Pay the tassel, what you owe him. Uncle Sam's teamsters bring you the sack of grain every week, and Uncle Sam's teamsters will carry the money easily to Jonathan Homespun.

Those who have for years received wheat from this Granary, without paying a cent, and thereby in a measure become our oppressors, are desired to profit by the農夫's plain narrative, and pay what they owe us!
